Advices

In early April 2020, there was a rock slide near the steps on the east side, at Anse Grande Ravine. The ONF carried out work to make the path accessible again on 18/05/2020.

NB: this is a non-circular trail, so you should leave your car at the end of the trail.

Go with a mountain guide to make the most of the site.

Don't cross the river if the sky is very overcast. Don't climb on or touch the engraved rocks. Don't set off after 3 pm.

In this natural setting, you should be particularly careful and alert, since Guadeloupe is subject to natural risks. It is vital to act in a responsible way, so that everyone can enjoy the hike!

Please note: unsupervised car parks and swimming.

On your path...

River Coulisse (A)

It takes its name (lit. "River Slide") from a water slide located upstream, where local inhabitants would come to relax and have fun.

You can swim, but be careful when it is raining because the level rises quickly.

Engraved rocks (B)

A series of engraved rocks (petroglyphs), with the centrepiece showing a woman in labour.

Attribution : PNG

"Chou piquant" (C)

This palm tree is endemic to Guadeloupe.

Attribution : PNG

Windmill (D)

One of the few windmills in Basse-Terre.

Attribution : AAMG

Lépiné tree (E)

Its very resistant wood was once used for frameworks and cabinet-making, to make parts of windmills and pestles for coffee mills.

The Kalinagos called it "Allioua".

Its bark was used to reduce fever and to make dyes.

Attribution : PNG

Manchineel tree (F)

Be careful, the tree's fruits look tasty, but you must never eat them or even touch them because they are poisonous. The same goes for all the other parts of the tree.

Gunpowder depot and cannons (G)

Gunpowder depot, and a few yards further on, well-conserved cannons. This was a strategic site, defending the Les Saintes Canal.

Attribution : PNG

vegetation flag (H)

The vegetation is continually exposed to the wind, so it looks as if the tree only grows on one side. The phenomenon is known as wind deformation.
